EICHMANN ADMITS HE KNEW JEWS WERE BEING EXTERMINATED IN MINSK AND RIGA AREAS, DECEIVED BERLIN AS TO FATE OF THESE DEPORTED PEOPLE; UPROOTED HUGE NUMBERS OF JEWS AND OTHERS, WITH HIS SINISTER POWER OF LIFE AND DEATH

During his trial in the court of Jerusalem for the murder of millions of Jews, in the Second World War, Eichmann was questioned by the prosecutor, Attorney General Gideon Hausner, about his action in sending Jews to Lodz in opposition to the wishes of the local Nazi governor, who said, "you were behaving like a horsetrader."

Behind this question was Eichmann's earlier testimony that he knew Jews were being exterminated in the Minsk and Riga areas, where those Jews were not supposed to have been sent, and wanted to save them by sending them to a concentration camp in another place, says the New York Herald Tribune. The prosecutor now wanted to show that, in any case, he had considerable power over the destination of the deportation trains.

Mr. Hausner asked Eichmann about other quotations in documents about his activities, including one ascribed to his superior, Heinrich Mueller, who was supposed to have said: "Had we had fifty Eichmanns we would have won the war against Russia, against France, against all the world."

Eichmann said this was remarked by Mueller in "a typically expansive, Bavarian manner," while allied airplanes were falling around him.

Eichmann admitted freely that from 1941 through 1943 his Gestapo office was active in removing non-Germans from newly-conquered territories in the East, which were newly annexed to the Reich. In pursuance of the effort to "Germanize" those areas, he said, he dealt with Poles, Slovenes, and gypsies, as well as Jews.

"So, in the year 1943", inquired the presiding judge Benjamin Halevi, "you still dealt with uprooting Poles from their usual places of residence?"

The prisoner replied affirmatively, explaining that this and all his other activities in this field were done under orders from Heinrich Himmler.

But he resisted to the end any admission that the atrocities which occurred in the transportation of the non-German populations were any of his doing, and he refused to say whether the Israeli prosecutor's figure that perhaps a half-million people were uprooted was or was not a good estimate.

In an effort to show that he was exercising a power of life and death over victims at this time, the prosecutor tried to show through documents that Eichmann even refused permission for Jews to receive parcels from the outside, says the New York Herald Tribune. But Eichmann insisted that this again was done by him under orders.

"What could I possibly have done?" he asked. "I had orders from above, and I had to obey them."

Another point on which Mr. Hausner attacked the accused man involved documents indicating that after Himmler issued orders making children up to ten years of age deportable, presumably for the gas chambers, Eichmann tried to raise the deportable age to fourteen. But again Eichmann insisted that was on orders from Heinrich Mueller, his Gestapo superior.

As to other documents showing that Eichmann ordered public hangings of Jews, the defendant could not even remember what the reasons were for these executions. But one thing he did remember was that he was merely conveying Himmler's orders in these matters.

Asked about a document showing that fifteen persons died on a transport which he arranged, the prisoner replied: "I can only say that we were not responsible for all the details. There were local authorities dealing with certain stages of the transports."

He said he didn't know "what was the fate of the groups sent to the east," but he volunteered: "Perhaps they were earmarked for death, or perhaps the object of their removal was an entirely different one."

But in the beginning of the extermination program, he asserted, he did not know "the facts," even though he had actually seen the preparatory work.

One of the more gruesome episodes about which Eichmann testified related to an order which he personally took to Gen. Odilo Globocnik, director of the "Einsatzgruppen" (Special Groups) massacres in Poland in 1942 and 1943. The order involved to what the prosecutor said were "a quarter of a million Jews." But Eichmann said he thought there were only 150,000.

He said he was directed to prepare the order and so dictated it to his secretary, Miss Werlmann, and then had a clerk register it as highly confidential, got Reinhard Heydrich's signature on it and lastly took it to Globocnik in Poland, says the New York Herald Tribune. He explained that it was a retroactive order, for the victims were already dead.

"Globocnik," he said, "had the macabre custom of requesting from Heydrich a personal authorization retroactively for people he had already killed. He always wanted this in writing. And Heydrich complied with the requests."

In describing again trips he made to the various Nazi concentration camps, Eichmann became deeply involved in a questioning by the prosecutor concerning his intervention on behalf of a Jew at Auschwitz named Storger. This was a Jewish leader with whom Eichmann had worked in deportation proceedings and somebody in Eichmann's own office had, behind his back, sent Storger off to the concentration camp. Then Himmler ruled that Storger must stay at Auschwitz.

The prosecutor tried to show that Eichmann's intervention to get the prisoner "lighter work" showed an ability to exert his influence in the Auschwitz camp. But the prisoner said this was a very special case involving not only his special intervention but that of his superior, and he himself really had no influence at Auschwitz, although he visited it a number of times.

In support of the prosecution's effort to show that Eichmann was busy everywhere in Europe in Jewish matters, Mr. Hausner brought out through another document that Eichmann was in Warsaw prior to the destruction by the Nazis of the Ghetto there, and consulted with others about intensifying the concentration of Jews in the Ghetto.

This document took the prisoner by surprise, after he had said he could not remember having visited Warsaw until after the uprising by the Jews of the Ghetto, says the New York Herald Tribune. But upon seeing the documentary proof he said it was good enough evidence for him.

Adolf Eichmann admitted that he had deceived the Nazi Foreign Ministry on the extent of the deportations and killing of Jews rounded up in Nazi-occupied and satellite countries, says the New York Times. Eichmann asserted he had deceived the Foreign Ministry on orders from Heinrich Himmler, head of the S. S. (élite guard). He said Himmler wanted to "camouflage certain things," in this case the fact that not all Jews who were deported from occupied countries were destined for forced labor in war industries of the Reich.

Eichmann admitted he had known that some of the Jews deported from France, Rumania, the Netherlands, and Belgium were clearly unfit for labor and were meant to be driven straight to the gas chambers of the Nazi death camps.

Attorney General Gideon Hausner brandished documents from captured Nazi files. He reminded Eichmann that on June 26, 1942, Eichmann wrote to the Foreign Ministry that Jews fit for physical labor were to be deported from Rumania. On the same day, Mr. Hausner continued, Eichmann drafted a letter to Himmler reporting that Jews unfit for labor would also be deported, obviously for annihilation.

"I had to deal with matters as ordered," Eichmann pleaded. "I cannot deny that Himmler gave orders to camouflage. We in the lower echelons had to implement the orders."

"Look here!" Mr. Hausner exclaimed. "You are mistaken. The Foreign Ministry discovered the swindle because Himmler sent them your letter. They received both letters, the one you sent about able-bodied Jews and the one you sent to Himmler.

"That is why Killinger (Manfred Killinger, Nazi envoy to Rumania) wrote in such a fury about 'these methods adopted by Herr Eichmann.' Do not try to push everything on Himmler — he has enough on his conscience as it is."

The presiding judge, Moshe Landau, broke in to ask: "I gather there was a deception on the part of someone in the Reich Security Office to deceive the Foreign Ministry, was there not?"

"Yes," Eichmann said. He went on to explain that because of some bureaucratic error his letter to Himmler had been mistakenly forwarded to the Foreign Ministry, says the New York Times. He also admitted having deceived the Foreign Ministry on the deportation of 90,000 Jews from France, the Netherlands, and Belgium in 1942 by informing the ministry that Jews fit for labor were being shipped to the East, whereas he actually ordered that the transports should include 10 per cent who were unfit for work.

"It was ordered by Himmler," he insisted.

"Did you know these people were being sent for immediate extermination?" shouted Mr. Hausner.

"I could have imagined it," replied Eichmann, "although it was not specified."

Mr. Hausner also obtained an admission from Eichmann that he wrote to the Foreign Ministry on March 9, 1942, saying he wanted to deport 1,000 stateless Jews and French nationals to the Auschwitz death camps, in southern Poland, and that, without awaiting a reply, he instructed his aide in Paris to negotiate with French authorities.

"That is correct," Eichmann said, "but the orders were given by Himmler."

Eichmann blamed insubordinate underlings, however, for the deportation from the Reich of Jews of Hungarian nationality. The Foreign Ministry had opposed this deportation.

"But you ignored this rejection and made the arrests anyway?" Mr. Hausner asked.

"Yes, certain local authorities did not follow orders," Eichmann replied.

"Don't tell me that local authorities in the Reich acted without orders from central authorities," Mr. Hausner retorted.

"It happens in all countries — local authorities make mistakes," Eichmann said.

Mr. Hausner turned to the famous "Eichmann proposes shooting" note that a foreign military official wrote after speaking with Eichmann by telephone in September, 1942, about the fate of 1,200 Serbian Jews.

Confronted with this note Eichmann admitted it was in the handwriting of his former colleague, Franz Rademacher, a specialist in the Foreign Ministry in the Reich's handling of Jews.

Eichmann denied ever having suggested that the Serbian Jews be shot. "The thing was a forgery!" he cried. In almost the same breath he condemned Rademacher as "a sloppy bureaucrat" for having put down such an important message on the margin of a letter, says the New York Times. Answering a barrage of questions, Eichmann described wartime conferences with associates in Berlin on the subject of anti-Jewish measures as "insignificant meetings."

Standing erect in his bulletproof glass dock, against the background of a huge map of Nazi-occupied Europe that had been hung on the wall beside his cage, Eichmann denied he had ever informed Jewish leaders in occupied countries as to the fate of deported Jews.

He rested his clenched fists on the desk and muttered: "But I gathered after a time they had become aware of what was happening."

Eichmann brushed aside repeated attempts by Mr. Hausner to get an admission that final and binding directives to Jewish communities had originated in his office.

"Some of them did," Eichmann conceded, "but only after instructions and directives from higher authorities."

Avoiding direct replies, Eichmann often took refuge in such answers as, "It is all in the documents." "If the documents say so, it must be right" and "I am testifying twenty years after the event and I cannot remember."

A witness at the Eichmann trial imitated a German soldier in trying to re-enact the scene in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in 1944 when Jews were assembled to provide hostages. The witness, Dr. Hinko Salz, a dentist, froze the spectators by suddenly rising in the witness stand and speaking German in a loud, harsh voice.

Dr. Salz, a chubby, partly bald veteran of the Yugoslav Army, snapped his heels together, threw out his chest, pulled in his chin and barked like a parade ground martinet. He was trying to give a picture of what happened at dawn, July 29, 1944. The Jews had been brought together in a square fenced off with barbed wire. They were addressed by a Gestapo captain.

The officer complained that a Jewish youth, 16 or 17 years old, had been involved in acts of sabotage, says the New York Times. Either hand over the boy by nightfall, the captain said, or 100 hostages about to be selected from the crowd would be dealt with, the witness testified. The Jews were lined up and counted off by the Jewish council of elders, he went on. Every fifth man had to step forward. The dentist was a fifth man.

The picking of the hostages had almost been completed, he said, "when I heard a cry, * * * a man shouting that he had a wife and four children." Others cried that they too had families to support, he added.

The witness said that he did not know whether the Gestapo officer was moved. He was a Volksdeutsch (German of foreign nationality) fifth columnist, the dentist remarked, but he had many Jewish acquaintances.

"He gave the order that everyone get back in line and that all bachelors should step forward instead," Dr. Salz [illegible]. The dentist was unmarried at [illegible] he stepped out with the other bachelors and was counted again. "I was especially lucky that day and again I was a fifth," the witness grinned. "All the Jews are 'chosen' people but I was in a group of 'chosen' among the 'chosen'."

"Suddenly, I remembered I had a document in my pocket that might help me," he went on. "I stepped forward intending to show the document and began speaking in a loud voice like a Prussian."

Here the dentist stood from his chair, assumed a rigid stance and shouted in German: "I protest. I claim the protection of the Geneva Convention." The witness said that one of the S.S. (élite guard) officers asked what his protest was about.

The witness said he replied:

"I rely on the Geneva Convention. I'm an officer, a prisoner of war, and I insist I'm protected by the Geneva Convention."

When the officer demanded proof, Dr. Salz said, he presented the document, which had been issued to him earlier by a German officer at a prisoner-of-war hospital where he had worked, says the New York Times. He said it described him as a medical officer and prisoner-of-war. "The officer took the paper and gave it to a higher officer, who with a motion of his left hand saved my life," the witness said.

Among the countries covered in the rapid-paced defense survey of documentary evidence were Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania, Slovakia, and, finally, Hungary, in part, says the New York Herald

Succoth: Source Of The American Thanksgiving

The Jewish Festival of Tabernacles began at sundown, September 24. Known in Hebrew as Succoth, the holiday commemorates the manner in which the ancient Israelites lived in the desert during their travels from Egyptian bondage towards the Land of Promise. Because of their belief that they were kept alive by divine providence, the Jews of Biblical days ordained the holiday as a time of thanksgiving to God. Later, when Palestine was settled, Succoth became a time of gratitude for the autumn harvest. It is referred to in the Biblical Book of Exodus (verse 16 of chapter 23) as the Festival of Ingathering.

Succoth is observed by special prayer services in home, synagogue, and religious school. Booths containing the fruits and greenery of the fall season are built near homes and in temples and special blessings of thanks for the beauty and bounty of nature are recited in them. Sermons, liturgy, and music stress the theme of gratitude. The American Thanksgiving holiday was deliberately patterned after Succoth by the Scripture-minded Pilgrims.

Traditional Jews observe Succoth for nine days; liberal Jews, for eight. Among both groups the final day is given over the rejoicing over the Torah, divine teachings which came to the Israelites during their desert wanderings. On the last day, known as Simchas Torah, the Joy of the Torah, the cycle of readings from the Pentateuch is completed with the last verses of Deuteronomy and immediately resumed with the beginning of Genesis. The music for Simchas Torah, as well as the mood in the Synagogue, is extremely lively.

Characteristic of the Succoth ritual is the passage from the Union Prayerbook: "Thy bounty, O Lord, provides for all the needs of man if he be wise and understanding in the use of Thy blessings. Teach us then to employ Thy gifts for the happiness of all Thy children. Let there be no famine or scarcity in any household or in any land. As soil and rain and sun unite to do Thy will, so unify the hearts of Thy children to fulfil Thy command to live together in mutual blessing. Spread over us the tabernacle of peace and brotherhood, now and evermore. Amen."

The above was prepared by the commission on information about Judaism of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and Central Conference of American Rabbis.

One of America's favorite festivals, Thanksgiving Day, came into being because the Pilgrim Fathers felt such a close attachment to the Bible that they modelled their day of gratitude after an ancient Jewish practice. The holiday of Succoth, still celebrated by Jews throughout the world, was the forerunner of the Thanksgiving holiday. When Jews gather in homes and synagogues during the period of the Succoth holiday, they will be taking part in observances dating back to Biblical days which had a strong impact upon the early settlers of America.

Succoth is Hebrew for "tents" or "tabernacles," and the holiday, which is featured by the construction of leafy booths near homes and in synagogues, recalls the manner in which the liberated slaves lived during their forty years of wandering towards the Promised Land. Succoth is essentially, therefore, a holiday of thanks to God for His care. The Pilgrims regarded themselves as latter-day Israelites. They saw many parallels between their experiences and those of the Jews of old. Like the Israelites, they groaned under the oppression of English tyranny. Like them, they resolved to flee the scene of their torment. Like them, they ventured on a trackless journey. Like them, their destination was a land of promise. And when, like the ancient Israelites, the pilgrims endured a hard year and later enjoyed the benefits of better times, they instituted a festival of thanksgiving patterned after the Biblical original.

Another interesting footnote to the source of America's Thanksgiving Day is the choice of day on which the holiday should occur. Because the Pilgrims wanted Thanksgiving to be celebrated by the adherents of all faiths as a separate holiday, they decided to avoid Sunday, the Christian Sabbath, and Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath, and even Friday, the Moslem Sabbath, and chose Thursday instead. On Thursday, the partisans of all the religions could join in a common outpouring of gratitude which would not interfere with their weekly Sabbath devotions.

The HIGHWAY VICTIMS INDEMNITY ACT states that, if you are involved in an accident - - no matter who is at fault, - - you must, on the SPOT, produce evidence of financial responsibility or lose your licence.

Evidence is available either by a card saying you have deposited $25,000 with the Director of the Motor Vehicle Bureau; or by a liability insurance card issued by an insurance company.

Avoid the consequences of the new Act. Make sure that you have one of these cards by Sunday, October 1.

United Hias Meeting Hears About Jewry's Care Of Migrants

Liberalization of the immigration and nationality laws of the United States was urged by former U.S. Senator Herbert H. Lehman at a meeting of United Hias Service held in the Ballroom of the Hotel Roosevelt, in New York. United Hias Service is the worldwide Jewish migration agency which has helped more than three million persons settle in the United States, Canada, Australia, Latin America, and other lands during the past 77 years.

Samuel Bronfman, national president of the Canadian Jewish Congress; and Sydney Einfeld, president of the Executive Council of Australian Jewry, received awards of honor at the meeting. These awards, illuminated plaques, cited Mr. Bronfman and Mr. Einfeld for their many years of leadership in the cause of the migrant, and paid tribute to the Jewish communities of Canada and Australia for their activities on behalf of migrants from rescue fronts and trouble spots throughout the world.

"Thousands of our persecuted, uprooted, and oppressed co-religionists have been able to find a haven, a home, and a new and better life in these countries through these activities," the citations state, adding that through "the humanity and hospitality of these governments and warm-hearted people, the hand of fellowship has been extended to newcomers of our faith who now live in dignity and self-respect, and thereby contribute to peace and freedom in the world."

Murray I. Gurfein, president of United Hias Service, said that mounting inquiries concerning Jewish refugees from Cuba in the United States prompted the agency to give priority attention to their problems and to send a resettlement expert to Miami, Florida, to work with representatives of other faiths in the Miami Cuban Refugee Emergency Center.

In emphasizing the worldwide scope of the agency's activities, Mr. Gurfein said that through the assistance of United Hias Service the first family of Jews from the Congo was helped to resettle in the United States during the winter. He further reported that, in 1960, "United Hias Service's operations on rescue, migration, and resettlement fronts all over the world resulted in aid to more than 12,000 Jewish men, women, and children."

New homes were found for approximately 8,800 refugees and migrants from Eastern and Western Europe, North Africa, and the Middle and Far East. The United States, Canada, Australia, and Latin America were among the countries "which extended a hearty welcome to migrants who were happy at the opportunity of going to a new life in the free world," Mr. Gurfein noted.

In addition to those who were helped to migrate, more than 8,200 persons benefitted from the agency's complete network of services, he reported. These services included counselling, reception to immigrants upon arrival, worldwide location of missing relatives, assistance to migrants in connection with their legal status, and resettlement assistance in Latin America and the United States in cooperation with local Jewish welfare agencies and community organizations.

The resolution on immigration unanimously adopted at the meeting calls for the revision of the United States immigration and nationality laws "in keeping with the humanitarian and democratic traditions of our country."

WLODAWA WITNESSES SOUGHT AGAINST NAZI OFFICER

Witnesses who can testify against an S.S. officer charged with murdering a rabbi and hundreds of other Jews in the town of Wlodawa, Poland, are sought by the World Jewish Congress in New York.

The Nazi is Richard Nitschke who, in addition to killing Jews in Wlodawa, on the River Bug, is charged with having organized and directed three deportations of Jews from that town to the extermination camp of Sobibor.

The murdered rabbi was Rabbi Solomon Samuel Leiner who was shot to death by Nitschke in the Jewish cemetery at Wlodawa in the spring of 1942.

Nazi victims able to give testimony against Nitschke are requested to contact Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, Director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs, 15 East 84th Street, New York, 28, N.Y.

EICHMANN ADMITS HE KNEW JEWS WERE BEING EXTERMINATED IN MINSK AND RIGA AREAS

Tribune. The defense procedure was the same for all these countries.

Several or more documents would be introduced by the defense attorney, and excerpts would be pointed out to the court which tended to put the blame for various actions on other officials of the Nazi government. Or, where the documents tended to incriminate Eichmann, the defense lawyer would read the pertinent parts and ask Eichmann to explain.

Most of the documents were either war-time letters or memoranda dealing with activities of the German Foreign Ministry and of the Nazi security services within German-occupied or German-allied countries.

The defense tactic was to try to show that it was the German Foreign Ministry that actually originated and supervised the major actions against the Jews in those countries, and that Eichmann was a mere arranger of train schedules.

In order to understand how all this documentation has been produced at the trial it is necessary to go back to the pre-trial activities of the Israeli police department's bureau 06.

It was this police research bureau that produced, during months of searching in the archives of several countries, including the United States, all the documents produced at this trial by either side.

The prosecution culled out from this enormous pile of material such documents as it wanted, to prove its charges against Eichmann, and it turned all these documents over to Dr. Servatius in advance of the trial, says the New York Herald Tribune. Also — and this is a point little understood — it gave to the defense all the other documents amassed.

In other words, it virtually handed to the defense the raw documentary material from which the defense forged its case in behalf of Eichmann. This was the only way in which there could be a fair trial for Eichmann. At the same time, of course, the state of Israel pays the cost of the defense.

Another point that should be made clear is that copies of all documents offered in evidence were provided for all the parties concerned — that is, for both the prosecution and the defense attorneys, for the judges of the tribunal and for Eichmann himself.

And a list of the particular documents to be submitted at a particular session was submitted to all parties in advance, so that all could have the pertinent documents before them when they were being taken up one at a time.

Brights FINE CANADIAN Wines
SINCE 1874

At your sabbath table, a decanter of wine is as much at home as a challah.

No wine is more welcome in Jewish homes in Canada than Mazel Tov, a wine made from Concord grapes grown on the sunny slopes of the Niagara Peninsula.

Mazel Tov is ruby red in colour, and richly sweet—but not cloying—to the taste. It's a wine you'll "remember", the kind of wine that you used to taste many years ago.

Mazel Tov, made 'Kosher l'Pesach' under strict rabbinical supervision, is available throughout the year for every 'simcha'.

Oldsmobile For 1962 Has New Styling And Colors, Also New Engineering Features

A hardtop with a roofline styling practically identical to that of a convertible, and new engineering features designed to cut lubrication and maintenance costs highlight details of Oldsmobile for 1962, as announced by General Motors of Canada.

Among the engineering refinements that will cut servicing costs are: replacement of all open-end lubrication fittings by factory-sealed units and revision of generator and distributor lubrication points to eliminate the need for periodic lubrication under normal operating conditions; and a self-adjusting power braking system which automatically compensates for brake lining wear by adjusting the clearance between lining and drum, eliminating the need for periodic brake adjustments.

Oldsmobile offers 17 body styles in three series — Dynamic 88, Super 88 and 98. Fifteen exterior colors are available. In addition, improved performance and increased fuel economy result from Oldsmobile's new combustion chamber and higher (10.25 to 1) compression ratios in Rocket and Skyrocket engines, as well as lowered rear axle gear ratios.

Diameter of the steering wheel on Oldsmobiles equipped with power steering has been reduced by one inch. This provides improved driving comfort and easier entry and exit for the driver. The steering wheel has also been raised for increased clearance between the wheel and front seat.

General Motors also announced that for the first time two soft-top models — the Sports Convertible and Cutlass Convertible — are being offered in the F-85 range of smaller-sized Oldsmobiles. A hardtop version of the powerful convertible Starfire, introduced in the regular line of Oldsmobiles last season, is also available in the 1962's.

The F-85 this year is available in nine models — the two convertibles; a four-door sedan; a four-door, two-seat station wagon; a four door, three-seat station wagon and a club coupe; a deluxe four-door sedan; a deluxe four-door two-seat station wagon and Cutlass Sports Coupe. Fifteen Magic-Mirror exterior colors — including a new Chariot Red — are available.

Two engines — the standard 155-horsepower aluminum Rocket and the optional four-barrel carburetor 185-horsepower Cutlass — are offered by F-85. Roto-matic power steering is also available as an extra-cost option. Styling changes in the F-85 include a completely restyled front end with new hood, grille and headlamp housings; and a restyled rear section with twin tail lamps mounted on each side.

The Jewish Community Council Of Montreal, Inc. And The Canadian Jewish Review

The following letter to the editor of the Canadian Jewish Review from the executive director of the Jewish Community Council of Montreal, Inc., over the signature of Rabbi Isaac L. Hechtman, should be of interest to the public:

September 14th, 1961

Mrs. F. Cohen,
Editor,
Canadian Jewish Review,
1500 Stanley St.,
Montreal.

Dear Mrs. Cohen:

I am very grateful to you for your kind attitude and sincere understanding of the problem which we discussed over the phone yesterday; and, following your advice, I am presenting it to you in writing.

Until now, Montreal was unique in the respect that there was no confusion with regard to the advertising of kosher food articles and the places dealing with same. No one dared to introduce "KOSHER STYLE", "SEMI-KOSHER" or "KOSHER CUT" - - all of which are not only treif, but also misrepresenting and misleading.

We therefore appreciate very much your agreeing with us that in the future, the "Review", like all Jewish and Anglo-Jewish publications in Montreal, will follow the tradition of refraining from accepting such ads.

Wishing you a Very Happy and Successful New Year, I am

Very sincerely yours,
Rabbi Isaac L. Hechtman (signed)
Executive Director.

Rabbi Hechtman has misled himself and his letter could mislead others. He did not speak to the Review editor at all, no one agreed with him on Review advertising policy past, present, or future, or promised anything. He spoke to a woman member of the Review staff who has no authority to agree or disagree with him and so suggested that he write to the editor who was out of town at the time.

As far as the Review is able to remember, it has never been called in as a consultant in an advisory capacity to the Jewish Community Council in the conduct of its affairs. With equal confidence it can state that the Jewish Community Council has never been called in, either, to assist or direct the Review with regard to what it should or should not accept in advertising. Of course, the Review is flattered at this quaint offer by the Community Council of an assignment as assistant deputy in restraint of adult advertisers who know what they want. But the Review is highly, and, perhaps, even notoriously, unqualified for the job of Kashruth vigilance, and must decline such a signal honor as undeserved.

As "representative of the Synagogues, Fraternal, Educational and Social Organizations of the Jewish community of Montreal", according to its stationery, the Community Council should address itself directly to the advertiser whose style offends the Council and thereby perform one of the functions for which it is in business and also, last but not least, for which the executive director gets paid.

This is a chaotic age of abdications from duty and Orthodox responsibility, and an appeal to part-time help in the shape of the Review is a gesture that can only be described as a form of weakness tantamount to scraping the bottom of the barrel. This is an era of Jewish existence in which semi-kosherness is enjoying an unprecedented success of modern times, and the Review would suggest (very diffidently, of course) that the Jewish Community Council drop the scales from its eyes and accept the reality as one of the glaring facts of life. Whether it does so or not, make a note of this:

The realm of Kashruth supervision constitutes an arena which the Canadian Jewish Review has not the slightest intention of entering. However, if it hears any more of this feather-brained, juvenile nonsense contained in the above letter, it might be induced to make one more observation or, maybe two, based on the past. Meantime, to this editorial is drawn the attention of Louis B. Glazer, Q.C., who was telephoned twice by the Review but was too "terribly busy" to call back, and also, therefore, apparently too busy to be on the praesidium of the Jewish Community Council of Montreal, Inc. f.f.c.

W. J. C. Survey Shows Libyan Jews In Tragic Situation

Libya's Jewish population of about 4,000 today is just about what it was a century ago, according to a report issued by Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, director of the World Jewish Congress Institute of Jewish Affairs. The present Jewish population shows a drop of 25,000 from the peak of slightly more than 29,000 in 1937. Less than one percent of the country's total population of 1,200,000, the Jews of Libya live mainly in Tripoli and Benghazi, towns of tragic memory to both communities.

Until 1959 the Jewish communities in the two cities were still functioning but early that year the government of the province of Tripolitania took charge of the Tripoli community, dissolving its central Jewish administrative council, and appointing a commissioner to administer the community and its assets. The authorities justified the measure by alleged charges of mishandling of community funds. A new law governing the community was promised, but so far nothing about its promulgation has become known. In 1960, the Alliance school, in existence for 70 years, was closed without previous notice or reason.

Dr. Robinson reports that the Jews still in Libya generally "live unmolested, although subject to restriction concerning travel abroad and communication with foreign countries, in particular Israel. Libya, as a member of the Arab League, does not permit postal communication with Israel. The social and sports clubs of the Jews have been closed."

The World Jewish Congress survey states that Egyptian propaganda is disseminated through the press and the radio while Egyptian teachers "are dominant in the schools." Early this year "there were strong demands for the confiscation of the property of the Jews as 'Zionist agents'."

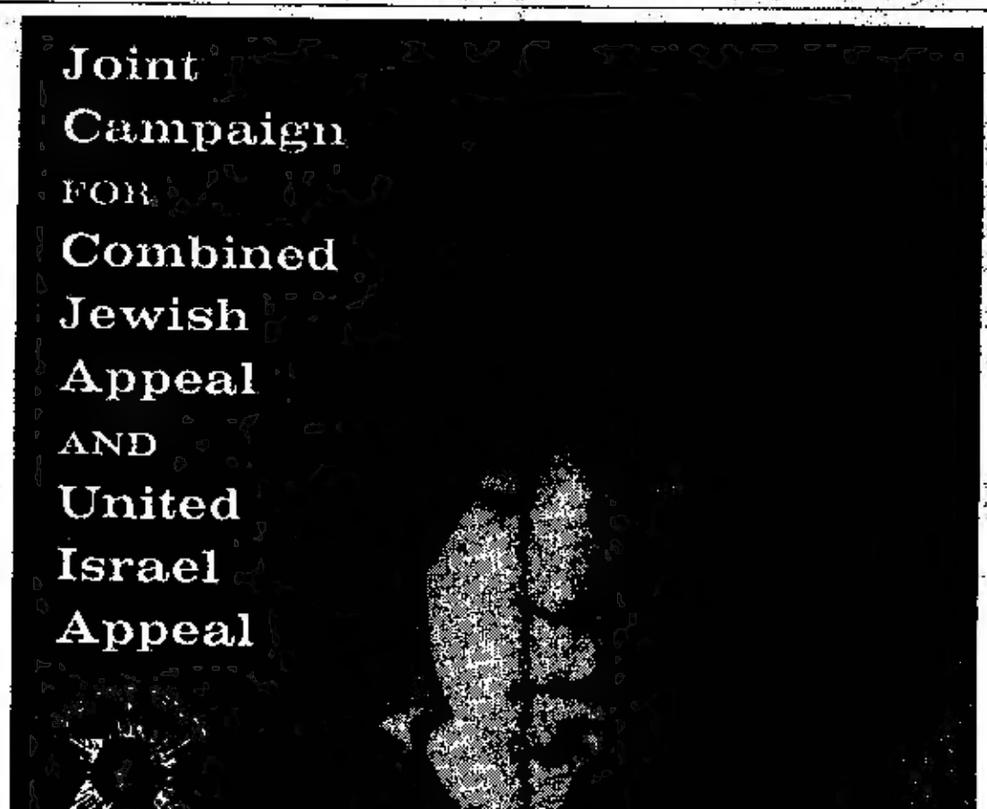
The turning point in the fate of Libyan Jewry occurred in 1938 with the introduction of Italian racial laws. Italian nationality was revoked, the Jewish communities lost their legal status, and their cultural institutions were closed. Jews were not permitted to own businesses in the European quarters of the various towns. With the outbreak of World War II, thousands of young Jews were forcibly drafted to build fortifications. Later, all Jewish men between the ages of 17 and 42 were taken from Tripoli to desert concentration camps, while women and children were subject to a special curfew.

To add to the community's tragic situation, the Jewish quarters in Tripoli, Benghazi, Tobruk, Bardia, Derna, Barca, and other towns were badly damaged by bombardment as the desert war engulfed Libya. Losses of life and property through war action were aggravated by persecution when the Germans entered the North African theater of war.

Then, in the latter part of the war, a large scale pogrom occurred in Tripolitania in March of 1945. Despite the presence of British troops, 130 Jews were killed and another 190 injured. Damage to property was estimated at about $2,000,000. Three years later, Tunisian volunteers on their way to Palestine attacked the Jewish quarter of Tripoli. Fourteen Jews were killed, synagogues desecrated, private property damaged.

The pogroms and disorders, together with the sufferings during the war, produced an economic debacle for Libyan Jewry. By 1948, one-third of the Jews in Tripoli and more than half of those in the interior required relief. A considerable number of them earned a meager livelihood by peddling, leaving their homes at the beginning of the week and returning on Friday before sundown. But when the war in Israel began, some of them failed to return. Their bodies would be found somewhere in the desert.

These incidents further reduced the community's economic position and many Jews from provincial towns fled to the larger cities, mainly Tripoli, where life was more secure. At the same time, an exodus, principally to Israel, began and by 1951, when Libyan sovereignty was established, the community numbered about 6,000. Further emigration, on a much smaller scale, has cut the Jewish population of Libya to its present day figure of about 4,000.



This year, more than ever before, heed the call to give generously to the Joint Campaign for Combined Jewish Appeal and United Israel Appeal. No other Jewish service does so much in so many ways for so many people. The Joint Campaign supports over 20 local health and welfare agencies and community services and many overseas organizations. Through all these agencies tens of thousands of people receive vitally needed aid to help them live better lives and to become productive citizens in their own communities.

The Canadian Jewish Review, one of only three weekly Audit Bureau of Circulations magazines in Canada, in English, gives wide, city-to-city coverage for an advertising message, and reaches a select consumer audience. The Canadian Jewish Review is received every Friday in the mail, and is read by the family groups which gather together for the Sabbath observance on Friday nights. Every issue is a guide to planning and purchasing, through each week. It is a community record; it is informative about the trends in Jewish thought, and the important Jewish world news of the day. The Canadian Jewish Review reaches the business and professional executive; and his home, where quality and prestige of goods and services are of paramount importance.
